The Great River Road

Ever since the Spanish explorer Hernando DeSoto first saw the Mississippi River in 1541, the Great River Road has played a major role in the economic and cultural development of the state of Mississippi. One of the main highways on Sallie's Bluff's right shore and the site where the river’s current was first crossed, the Great River Road is a historic highway paralleling the Mississippi River for hundreds of miles.

Begin the Great River Road journey in Mississippi by crossing the river on the Greenville Bridge, the oldest bridge in the United States, and then continue to the historic community of Natchez. This is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and the birthplace of the Mississippi
